

Sinclair
Broadcasting's
decision to force
their stations to air an anti-Kerry
documentary days
before the election
is a clear example
of the dangers of media consolidation.

Preventing
monopolistic control of media sources is critical to democracy, and
enforcement of rules
to protect fairness
in broadcasting are also crucial.
Sinclair's conduct
clearly shows the potential for abuse
and the ability of a media conglomerate
to distort the flow
of accurate,
unbiased news
reporting.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies
control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line
and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something
produced at "News Central" far away,
it's more important
that we see real people from our own communities and more
substantive news
about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions
show why we need to strengthen media
ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license
renewal process
needs to involve
more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
